Introduction

Households constitute a basic demographic and economic unit of society. Except for the part of the population which occupies institutions or other forms of group housing, people live in households, which are defined as the person or persons occupying a housing unit. Consequently, the number of households is by definition equal to the number of occupied housing units. Given this relationship between households and housing units, projections of households are obviously of importance to homebuilders and the myriad industries that are affiliated with housing construction. But the importance of household trends and household projections extends beyond residential construction needs. Households, more so than individuals, are the consumers for many products and services. For example, utilities are typically linked to household consumption, as are governmental services such as sanitation and mail delivery.

This report provides forecasts of households to the year 1995 for the state, the Area Development Districts, and each of the state's 120 counties. These forecasts are an important complement to the Urban Studies Center's population projections and are based on the 1986 edition of that series. While these household forecasts are meant to be used in conjunction with the Center's population projections, it should be noted that the published population projections are for the total population, whereas the household forecasts are solely for the household population and exclude persons in institutions or group quarters.

Households are forecast by household type and age of the householder (head of household). A glossary of terms is provided on pages A1 and A2. Households are categorized as family or nonfamily households. Family households include at least one person in the household other than the householder who must be related to the householder by blood or marriage. Family households are further categorized as married-couple families, families with a male householder and no wife present, and families with a female householder and no husband present. Nonfamily households consist of those persons living alone or householders living with other unrelated individuals. Approximately nine of ten nonfamily households are persons living alone. Nonfamily households are further categorized by the sex of the householder. Six age groups are shown in this report for each of the household types: 15-24, 25-34, 35-44, 45-54, 55-64, and 65+; however, eleven age groups are used within the household forecast model.

These household forecasts are based on the Center's population projections and on assumptions about changes in the tendency to form households for specific age and sex groupings of the household population. The primary cause of change in the number of households is the change in the household population. For the state as a whole, population growth and changes in the age structure of the population account for 80 percent of the projected increase in households from 1980 to 1995. The balance of the increase in households is due to projected changes in the rate of household formation (i.e., for a given population, more households may be expected to form). The accuracy of these household forecasts is thus dependent on the accuracy of the population projections and on the accuracy of the assumptions about future changes in household formation patterns. These patterns are discussed more fully in the Analysis of Results and Methods and Assumptions sections.

Analysis of Results

The total number of households in the state is forecasted to be 1,638,007 by the year 1995. The 1995 forecast is an increase of 374,652 households over 1980, or an average annual increase of 25,000 households. This increase is somewhat slower than the 1970 to 1980 average annual increase of 28,000 households. The average annual rate of change in households for the forecast period is 2.0 percent, compared to the 1970 to 1980 average of 2.8 percent. This slowdown in household growth is the result of a projected lower growth rate for the population of the state and less rapid change in household formation patterns. Aging of the population, particularly the baby-boom cohort, is expected to contribute significantly to the increase in households. This can be readily seen by the proportion of white males in successive age groups who were householders in 1980. For example, 52 percent of 20-to-24-year-old white males in Kentucky were householders compared to 82 percent of 25-to-29-year-olds and 91 percent of 30-to-34-year-olds.

The changes forecast for specific types of households are continuations of past trends. Nonfamily households are expected to increase at a faster rate than family households: 58 percent versus 22 percent (See Table 1.) However, the most rapidly increasing type of household is the female-headed family with no husband present (which more than doubles). By contrast married-couple households increase by only 8 percent. The rapid growth in female-headed families with no husband present has its counterpart in the rapid growth of male-headed nonfamilies, which are forecast to increase by 75 percent.

Female Householder	47.0	27.0	91.6	232.4	84.7	3.1	37.6

The most rapidly increasing age group of householders is the 35-to-44-year-old category (up 68 percent), followed by 45-to-54-year-olds (56 percent) and householders aged 65 and over (41 percent). The 35-44 and 45-54 age groups are impacted by the baby-boom cohort during this period. The younger age groups show very slow growth for the 25-to-34-year-old householders and a 19 percent decline for the 15-to-24-year-old householders.

The slow rate of increase forecast for married-couple families results in a significant shift in the percentage distribution of households by type of household. (See Figure 1.) In 1970 married-couple families were 72 percent of all households. This fell to 65 percent by 1980 and is forecast to drop to 55 percent by 1995. In a related movement, single-parent families increased from 11 percent of all households in 1970 to 13 percent in 1980. This is forecast to jump to 19 percent by 1995. This is a somewhat higher proportion of single-parent families than is projected for the nation (16 percent). Marriage and divorce trends within Kentucky will be monitored over the next several years in order to evaluate the accuracy of this forecast.

With increases in the divorced and never-married populations, the percentage of male householders in nonfamily households increased from 6 percent in 1970 to 9 percent in 1980 and is forecast to go to 12 percent by 1995. Similarly, female householders in nonfamily households went from 11 percent to 14 percent and are forecast at 16 percent of all households by 1995.

These proportions are slightly below those forecast for male and female householders in nonfamily households for the nation as a whole.

Based on the 1980 to 1995 household forecast, the fastest growing Area Development Districts (see Table 2) will be Barren River (37 percent), Big Sandy (37 percent), Bluegrass (36 percent), Kentucky River (36 percent), and Cumberland Valley (35 percent). Only three Area Development Districts have household increases forecast below 25 percent for 1980 to 1995: Purchase (16 percent), Pennyrile (18 percent), and Buffalo Trace (20 percent). The fastest growing counties are forecast to be Boone (70 percent), Oldham ([illegible] percent), Bullitt (56 percent), Warren (54 percent), Jessamine (50 percent), and Lawrence (50 percent). The largest numerical increases are forecast for Jefferson and Fayette counties, with increases of 54,000 and 29,600 respectively. Scott County, the site of the new Toyota plant, is forecast to have a household increase of 41 percent from 1980 to 1995. (For a discussion of the assumptions made in projecting Scott County's population, see How Many Kentuckians, the 1986 edition.[1])

It should be stressed that the household forecast included in this report assumes that household-formation patterns in Kentucky will continue to generate more households for a given population in nearly all age groups, with the exception being young adults aged 15-24 years. The changes in household-formation patterns are based on national changes in householder proportions, and Kentucky lags behind national levels in this area by approximately ten years. The degree of change in household-formation patterns is assumed to be consistent across counties within the state, although each county has its own set of household-formation rates based on the 1980 Census. Individual local conditions might warrant revision of these assumptions, particularly if changes in local economic and housing conditions are inconsistent with national trends. For this reason, this household forecast is indicative of the changes that would occur only if the county's household-formation patterns follow national trends.

A recent report by the Census Bureau[2] presents household projections for the United States to the year 2000. Three different series are presented based on continuation of trends in household-formation patterns (Series A), holding current household-formation patterns constant (Series C), and a mid-range (Series B) based on a significant slowing in the changes in household-formation patterns for given age groups. The average annual rate of increase in households in the United States for 1980 to 1995 is projected to be from 1.8 percent (Series A) to 1.4 percent (Series C), with the mid-range projection at 1.6 percent (Series B).

While a detailed analysis of the national projections is in process, some interesting comparisons between the national household projections and the Kentucky household projections have already been made. A projection series for Kentucky that is comparable to Series C for the nation was prepared by holding the 1980 household headship proportions (i.e., the percentages of each age and sex cohort that are householders) constant for each county, so that the only changes would be attributable to population increase and aging. Under this assumption, the number of households forecast for Kentucky in 1995 would be 1,561,269, or a 1.6 percent average annual increase. (This series is available only in printout form by special order from the Urban Studies Center.) This forecast should be viewed as unrealistically conservative since there is no evidence that household-formation patterns have stabilized.

The forecast published in this report is similar to the Series A projection for the nation in the assumptions made about future changes in household-formation patterns. Although a Kentucky forecast comparable to Series B has not been made, an average of the two forecasts produces a reasonable approximation of Series B. The average of the 1995 forecast presented in this report (1,638,007) and the forecast based on holding 1980 household-formation patterns constant (1,561,269) is 1,600,000 households.

Methods and Assumptions

The model developed for forecasting households in Kentucky is based on applying household-formation proportions to the projected household population by age, sex, and race. The projected household population is derived from the most recent edition of the Urban Studies Center's population projections. The population projection model first projects household population for age groups under 65 and then adds the numbers from the group quarters population to that projection. Consequently, the household population projections were used directly from the population model for ages 15 to 64.

The projected population for ages 65 and older includes the group quarters population since the older population in hospitals, nursing homes and related institutions generally ages in place. The projected population for this age group was adjusted to reflect household population by applying (multiplying) the ratio of household population to total population for ages 65-69, 70-74, 75-79, 80-84, 85+, controlling for sex and race. These household-to-total-population ratios were calculated from the 1980 Census of Population for each county (Summary Tape File 2B, Tables B10 and B8) and were held constant for the projection period.

Simply stated, the household forecasts were derived by multiplying the projected household population by the percentage of households for each age, sex, and race category. These household-formation patterns, or householder proportions, were calculated for each county from the 1980 Census and adjusted for national trends in householder proportions. The 1980 householder proportions for counties were calculated for eleven age groups, with additional controls for sex and race. The age groups used in the model are: 15-17, 18-19, 20-24, 25-29, 30-34, 35-39, 40-44, 45-54, 55-64, 65-74, 75+. (This is the maximum age detail available through special order from the Urban Studies Center.)

Householder rates for males were calculated for husband-wife families, other families headed by males without spouses present, and nonfamilies headed by males. The male's age was used for the householder of all husband-wife households, even if the female was identified in the Census as the householder. This was necessary to ensure comparability over time and it simplified processing as well by avoiding the otherwise extremely low rates for female householders of husband-wife families. Householder rates for females were calculated for families headed by females without spouses present, and nonfamilies headed by females. Residual categories for other males and other females in households were also calculated so that the adult household population could be completely accounted for in the forecast.

The base data for deriving the householder rates were from the 1980 Census, Summary Tape File 2B, Tables A14, B7, and B10. Because of limitations in the base data, it was necessary to assume that husband-wife families and male householders without spouses, as percentages of households headed by males, were the same for whites and nonwhites.

Unfortunately data are not available to directly update the 1980 householder rates for counties. Consequently, the householder proportions for the state as a whole were estimated for 1985 based on changes in national householder proportions derived from the annual Current Population Survey. Projections of the state's householder proportions to 1990 and 1995 were also based on trends in the national householder proportions. The model incorporates a raking procedure that adjusts the county-level householder proportions so that the sum of households for each age-, sex-, and race-specific cell is equal to the state level control total for that cell. In addition, the sum of the county's household population for each age-, sex-, and race-specific cell is controlled to the county-level household population projections for that cell.

For the 1980 to 1985 changes in householder proportions, it was assumed that the state proportions changed by the same amount estimated for the nation in the Current Population Survey. The change in the national householder proportions for 1980-1985 was extrapolated from the 1980-1984 change. Projected changes in householder proportions from 1985 to 1990 and 1995 were based on a review of national changes for each age-, sex-, and race-specific cell. Three-year averages were calculated for the national householder proportions. Changes in these averages from 1970-1975, 1975-1980, and 1980-1984 (the latest year available at the time) were evaluated to determine whether the long-term trend was stable, increasing, decreasing, or possibly changing direction altogether. In most cases the householder proportions were relatively stable over time and the long-term (1970-1984) average annual change was used to predict the 1985 to 1990 and 1995 changes.

While the application of the long-term average annual change was the general rule, there were some exceptions. When there was evidence of deceleration in the trend, the average annual change was decreased by the ratio of the 1980-84 average annual change to the 1975-80 average annual change. When the trend was basically unstable, the householder proportions were held constant after 1985 or 1990. In a very few cases, particularly where householder proportions approached zero, minimum proportions were imposed. The householder proportions for the state as a whole are provided in Table 3 for 1980, 1985, 1990, and 1995.

Changes in the householder proportions are based on national trends which could shift in the future. The Center will continue to monitor the Current Population Survey to determine when revisions in the householder proportions are warranted. In addition, the Center will attempt to review local data on marriage and divorce to provide county-specific estimates of the changes in household-formation proportions. Users of this series of household forecasts having access to local surveys or other local sources of data that are pertinent to estimating households (such as public utility data) are encouraged to share their data with the Center. Communication should be directed to Dr. Ted Koebel, Urban Studies Center, Gardencourt Campus, University of Louisville, Louisville, Kentucky 40292, (502) 588-6626.

APPENDIX

FAMILY. Two or more persons, including the householder, who are related by birth, marriage, or adoption, and who live together as one household; all such persons are considered as members of one family. (Persons not in families and not inmates of institutions are classified as unrelated individuals.)

If the son/daughter of the person or couple who maintains the household and the son's or daughter's spouse and/or children are members of the household, they are treated as part of the householder's family. A roomer/boarder and his/her spouse who are not related to the person or persons who maintain the household, or a resident employee and his/her spouse living in are not counted as a family, but as individuals unrelated to the householder. Thus, a household can contain only one family for purposes of census tabulations.

A person maintaining a household alone, or two or more unrelated persons are regarded as a household but not as a family. Thus, some households do not contain a family.

Subfamily. A married couple with or without own children, or one parent with one or more own children (parent-child group), living in a housing unit and related to the householder, but excluding the householder (for example, a young married couple sharing the home of the husband's or wife's parents).

Since subfamily members are counted as part of the householder's family, the number of subfamilies is not included in the count of families per se.

FAMILY TYPE. Families are classified by type according to sex of the householder and the presence of relatives, based on questions on sex and relationship.

Married-couple family. A family in which the householder and his/her spouse are enumerated as members of the same household.

Other family:

Male householder, no wife present. A family with a male householder and no spouse of householder present.

Female householder, no husband present. Family with a female householder and no spouse of householder present.

HOUSEHOLD. The persons or persons occupying a housing unit.

HOUSEHOLD TYPE. Households are classified by type according to sex of the householder and the presence of relatives based on questions asked on sex and relationship.

Family household. A household including a family. A family household may also include nonrelatives living with the family. The following subcategories are frequently provided: married-couple family; family with male householder, no wife present; and family with female householder, no husband present.

Nonfamily household. A household consisting of a person living alone or of a householder living with other unrelated individuals (see Unrelated Individual).

RELATIONSHIP. This classification is based on relationship to the householder.

In household. Persons in the household include:

Householder. The person who was reported in the census as the householder. This reference person was to be the person or one of the persons in whose name the home was owned or rented. If there was no such person, any adult household member at least 15 years old who was not a roomer, boarder, or paid employee was to be reported.

Family householder. A householder living with one or more persons related to him or her by birth, marriage, or adoption.

Nonfamily householder. A householder living alone or only with persons not related to him or her.

Spouse. The husband or wife of the householder, living with the householder. This category may include persons in common-law marriages as well as persons in formal marriages; it does not include a partner or roommate of the opposite sex.

UNRELATED INDIVIDUAL. An unrelated individual may be (1) a householder living alone or only with persons not related to him or her, (2) a roomer, boarder, partner, roommate, or resident employee unrelated to the householder, or (3) a group quarters member who is not an inmate of an institution.

Examples of unrelated individuals include a widow who occupies her house alone or with one or more other persons not related to her, a roomer not related to the householder, a maid living as a member of her employer's household, and a resident staff member in a hospital dormitory. Persons living with one or more relatives in a household where the householder is not related to any of them are classified in the census as unrelated individuals; for example, a husband and wife who rent a room from a householder to whom they are not related.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

This report presents detailed projections of households for 1985, 1988, 1990, and 1995. In addition, the number of total households is projected for the year 2000. The number of households projected for each of these periods is 1,330,154 (1985), 1,379,167 (1988), 1,418,913 (1990), 1,508,512 (1995), and 1,594,818 (2000). These reflect annual growth rates of 1.1 percent from 1980-1985, 1.2 percent from 1985-1988, 1.4 percent from 1988-1990, 1.3 percent from 1990-1995, and 1.1 percent from 1995-2000.

Nonfamily households are expected to increase at a much faster annual rate than family households (3.5% v. 0.7% between 1985 and 1995). The most rapidly increasing age group of householders between 1985 and 1995 is the 45-54 year old category (4.2% annually), followed by householders aged 65 and over (2.4% annually). Household growth among 45-54 year-olds will be influenced by the large size of the baby boom cohort and the tendency of this cohort to form more single parent families and nonfamily households than previous cohorts.

Groups following the baby boomers have fewer people to form households, which will increasingly result in lower rates of increase in total households. The number of households in the 15-24 and 25-34 age groups is projected to decline between 1985 and 1995. The smaller numbers of people in these (and subsequent) age groups will continue to lower the overall rate of growth in households.

The fastest growing Area Development Districts are projected to be Big Sandy, Barren River, Bluegrass, Cumberland Valley, Kentucky River, and Lincoln Trail. Oldham, Bullitt, Scott, Warren, and Boone counties are projected to be the fastest growing counties in the state. Fayette County is projected to exceed 100,000 households in 1995 (100,559) to become the second county in the state with over 100,000 households. Jefferson County is projected to have 284,212 households by 1995.

The number of persons per household is projected to continue to decline, but at a much slower rate than during the 1970s. For 1995, the average number of persons per household in the state is projected to be 2.56, a 6.2 percent decline from 1985. During the 1970s population per household dropped by 11.0 percent. Average household size is projected to fall below 2.5 persons per household in 15 counties--mostly urban centers, university locations, and a cluster of counties in western Kentucky.

INTRODUCTION

Since 1986 when the first edition of this report was released, there have been significant changes in household formation patterns. The household projections provided in the 1986 edition of this report were based on the expectation that the dramatic increase in the rate of household formation posted during the 1970s would continue, particularly among the baby boom cohort which was advancing into the 30-39 and 40-44 age groups. More recent data show that the rate of increase in household formation has slowed considerably. These changes, along with lowered projections of population growth, necessitated significant revisions in the household forecast.

The total number of households forecast for Kentucky in 1995 in this report is 1,508,512, which was approximately the level previously projected for 1990 and 8 percent lower than the level previously projected for 1995. This is primarily the result of a change in the projected household headship rates (the percentage of a given age group forming households) which reflects a slower rate of decline in the proportion of husband-wife households than previously projected, a slower increase in the formation of female headed households, and a slower increase in the proportion of nonfamily households. The largest revisions are in the number of households projected for the 35-44 year old age group, which has been reduced by 14 percent below the previous projection. The proportion of males and females in the 35-39 and 40-44 age groups who are not heads of households was increased, thereby reducing the projected number of households. This reflects more married and unmarried couples than previously projected.

Households constitute a basic demographic and economic unit of society. Except for the part of the population which occupies institutions or other forms of group housing, people live in households, which are defined as the person or persons occupying a housing unit. Consequently, the number of households is by definition equal to the number of occupied housing units. Given this relationship between households and housing units, projections of households are of obvious importance to homebuilders and the myriad industries affiliated with housing construction. However, the importance of household trends and household projections extends beyond residential construction needs. Households, more so than individuals, are the consumers of many products and services. For example, utilities are typically linked to household consumption, as are governmental services such as sanitation and mail delivery.

This report provides forecasts of households to the year 1995 for the state, the Area Development Districts (ADDs), and each of Kentucky's 120 counties. These forecasts are an important complement to the Urban Research Institute's (formerly the Urban Studies Center) population projections and are based on the 1988 edition of that series. While these household forecasts are meant to be used in conjunction with the Institute's population projections, it should be noted that the published population projections are for the total population, whereas the household forecasts are solely for the household population and exclude persons in institutions or group quarters.

Households are forecast by household type and age of the householder (head of household). A glossary of terms is provided at the end of this report. Households are categorized as family or nonfamily households. Family households include at least one person in the household other than the householder who must be related to the householder by blood or marriage. Family households are further categorized as married-couple families, families with a male householder and no wife present, and families with a female householder and no husband present. Nonfamily households consist of those persons living alone or householders living with other unrelated individuals. Approximately nine of ten nonfamily households are persons living alone. Nonfamily households are further categorized by the sex of the householder. Six age groups are shown in this report for each of the household types: 15-24, 25-34, 35-44, 45-54, 55-64, and 65+; however, 11 age groups are used within the household forecast model and are available upon request through the Kentucky State Data Center.[1]

These household forecasts are based on the Institute's population projections and on assumptions about changes in the tendency to form households for specific age and sex groupings of the household population. The primary cause of change in the number of households is the change in the household population. For the state as a whole, population growth and changes in the age structure of the population account for 80 percent of the projected increase in households from 1980 to 1995. The balance of the increase in households is due to projected changes in the rate of household formation (i.e., for a given population, more households may be expected to form). The accuracy of these household forecasts is thus dependent on the accuracy of the population projections and on the accuracy of the assumptions about future changes in household formation patterns. These patterns are discussed more fully in the Analysis of Results and Methods and Assumptions sections.

ANALYSIS OF RESULTS

The total number of households in the state is projected to be 1,508,512 by the year 1995. The 1995 forecast is an increase of 178,358 households over 1985, or an average annual increase of 17,800 households. This increase is significantly slower than the 1970 to 1980 average annual increase of 28,000 households. The average annual rate of change in households for the forecast period is 1.3 percent, compared to the 1970 to 1980 average of 2.8 percent. This slowdown in household growth is the result of a projected lower growth rate for the population of the state (0.6% annually from 1985-1995 v. 1.4 percent from 1970-1980) and stabilization in household formation patterns. Because of shifts in household formation patterns, aging of the population, and changing fertility rates, the number of persons per household has been declining. Consequently, the rate of increase in households has been faster than the rate of increase in population. During the 1970s, households in Kentucky increased at double the annual average rate for population (2.8% v. 1.4%). This pattern is projected to continue into the 1990s, when the annual rate of increase in households (1.3%) remains approximately twice the rate of increase in population (0.6%).

The changes forecast for specific types of households are continuations of past trends. Nonfamily households are expected to increase at a much faster annual rate than family households: 3.5 percent v. 0.7 percent. (See Table 1.) A major revision in the current forecast compared with its predecessor is a much slower rate of increase for female headed families (previously projected at an annual rate of 8.5% and now projected at 2.1%). Families headed by males without spouses in the household are projected to increase at a rate of 4.5 percent annually, but will only account for 3 percent of all households.

The most rapidly increasing age group of householders between 1985 and 1995 is the 45-54 year-old category (4.2% annually), followed by householders aged 65 and over (2.4%). By 1985 most of the baby boom cohort had already reached the age of 25 and those born between 1945 and 1950 had moved into the 35-44 age group. Household growth among 45-54 year olds during the projection period will be influenced by the large size of the baby boom cohort, plus the different household formation patterns (fewer husband-wife households, more single parent households, and more nonfamily households) that exist for this group when compared with previous cohorts.

Groups following the baby boomers have fewer people to form households. Consequently, the numbers of households in the 15-24 and 25-34 age groups is projected to decline between 1985 and 1995, a pattern that is likely to accelerate during subsequent periods. The number of households headed by 55-64 year olds is expected to remain almost stable, but the number of older households should increase significantly. Markets oriented to household demand will be strongly affected by these changes, with increased attention paid to the 45-54 age group and the 65 and older group.

As previously projected, the composition of households is expected to continue to shift away from married-couple families toward single parent families and nonfamilies. (See Figure 1.) In 1980 married-couple families made up 65 percent of all households and are forecast to drop to 57 percent by 1995. In a related movement, single parent families are projected to increase from 13 percent of all households to 15 percent.

With increases in the divorced and never married populations, the percentage of householders in nonfamily households is projected to increase from 9 percent in 1980 to 12 percent in 1995 for males and from 14 percent to 16 percent for females.

Based on the 1985 to 1995 period, the fastest growing Area Development Districts (see Table 2 and Figure 2) will be Big Sandy (1.9% per year), Barren River and Bluegrass (1.8%), Cumberland Valley (1.7%), and Kentucky River and Lincoln Trail (1.6%). Only two Area Development Districts have household increases forecast below one percent per year: Pennyrile (0.9%) and Purchase (0.3%). The fastest growing counties are forecast to be Oldham (4.4% per year), Bullitt (3.4%), Scott and Warren (3.3%), and Boone (3.1%).

Between 1985 and 1995 the number of persons per household is projected to decline from 2.73 to 2.56. (See Table 3.) This is a 6.2 percent decline in average household size, substantially smaller than the 11.0 percent between 1970 and 1980 (from 3.17 to 2.82). The largest percentage decline in average household size is projected for the Kentuckiana Region, which is also projected to have the lowest population per household value, followed by the Purchase and Bluegrass ADDs. The largest projected population per household is for the Kentucky River ADD, followed by Cumberland Valley and Lincoln Trail. Average household size is projected to fall below 2.5 persons per household in 15 counties (mostly urban centers, locations of universities, and a cluster of counties in western Kentucky). The largest average household sizes at the county levels are projected for eastern Kentucky, with only Clay, Magoffin, and Martin counties having average sizes of 3.0 persons or more.

The detailed projections of households presented in this report are for 1985, 1988, 1990, and 1995. A projection for the year 2000 has been prepared by holding the household formation rates for each age group constant after 1995. The projection of total households for each period is presented in Table 4.

These projections, as with the 1986 edition projections, were prepared based on a review of recent and long-term trends in household formation rates for population groupings by age, sex, and race. There are few data available at the state level to monitor these trends, so national data were used to guide the projection of household formation in Kentucky. The results have been compared with the only data collected in the state on household patterns (in the Current Population Survey conducted by the Bureau of the Census) and the distribution of households by type (e.g., husband-wife, female family) was virtually identical between the survey data and these estimates. In addition, the total number of households estimated for Kentucky for 1988 in this report is within .003 percent of the Census Bureau's estimate for the number of households in Kentucky.

The only year for which the Bureau of the Census has prepared county level estimates of households is 1985. There are only two counties where there is any significant divergence between the Census Bureau's estimate and the estimate reported here for 1985: Christian and Oldham. In Christian County, the Bureau estimated 20,800 households compared with 19,113 in this report. For Oldham County, the Bureau estimated 8,700 households compared with our estimate of 9,592. Current estimates of the population in Oldham County indicate that the Bureau's household estimate for Oldham County (which was prepared in 1986) is too low since it would imply a larger average household size in 1985 than in 1980 when the trend in most communities has been toward smaller households.

The available evidence from the Current Population Survey and from the Bureau's estimates of households at the state and county levels confirms the household projections presented here. It bears stressing, nonetheless, that these projections are based on projected population characteristics and on projections of household formation rates, and the latter are based largely on national data. The methods and assumptions used in these household projections are presented in detail in the next section.

METHODS AND ASSUMPTIONS

The model developed for forecasting households in Kentucky is based on applying household formation proportions to the projected household population by age, sex, and race. The projected household population is derived from the most recent edition of the Urban Research Institute's population projections. The population projection model first projects household population for age groups under 65 and then adds the numbers from the group quarters population to that projection. Consequently, the household population projections were used directly from the population model for ages 15 to 64.

The projected population for ages 65 and older includes the group quarters population since the older population in hospitals, nursing homes, and related institutions generally ages in place. The projected population for this age group was adjusted to reflect household population by applying (multiplying) the ratio of household population to total population for ages 65-69, 70-74, 75-79, 80-84, 85+, controlling for sex and race. These household-to-total-population ratios were calculated from the 1980 Census of Population and Housing for each county (Summary Tape File 2B, Tables B10 and B8) and were held constant for the projection period.

Simply stated, the household forecasts were derived by multiplying the projected household population by the percentage of households for each age, sex, and race category. These household formation patterns, or householder proportions, were calculated for each county from the 1980 Census and adjusted for state trends in householder proportions between the years 1970, 1975, and 1980 and national trends in householder proportions between 1970, 1975, 1980, 1985, and 1988. The 1980 householder proportions for counties were calculated for 11 age groups, with additional controls for sex and race. The age groups used in the model are: 15-17, 18-19, 20-24, 25-29, 30-34, 35-39, 40-44, 45-54, 55-64, 65-74, 75+. (This is the maximum age detail available by special order from the Urban Research Institute.)

Householder rates for males were calculated for husband-wife families, other families headed by males without spouses present, and nonfamilies headed by males. The male's age was used for the householder of all husband-wife households, even if the female was identified in the Census as the householder. This was necessary to ensure comparability over time and it simplified processing by avoiding the otherwise extremely low rates for female householders of husband-wife families. Householder rates for females were calculated for families headed by females without spouses present, and nonfamilies headed by females. Residual categories for other males and other females in households were also calculated so that the adult household population could be completely accounted for in the forecast.

The base data for deriving the householder rates were from the 1980 Census, Summary Tape File 2B, Tables A14, B7, and B10. Because of limitations in the base data, it was necessary to assume that husband-wife families and male householders without spouses, as percentages of households headed by males, were the same for whites and nonwhites.

Unfortunately data are not available to directly update the 1980 householder rates for counties. Consequently, the householder proportions for the state as a whole were estimated for 1985 based on changes in national householder proportions derived from the annual Current Population Survey. Projections of the state's householder proportions to 1990 and 1995 were also based on trends in the national householder proportions. The model incorporates a raking procedure that adjusts the county level householder proportions so that the sum of households for each age-, sex-, and race-specific cell is equal to the state level control total for that cell. In addition, the sum of the county's household population for each age-, sex-, and race-specific cell is controlled to the county level household population projections for that cell.

Projected changes in householder proportions for 1985, 1990, and 1995 were based on a review of national changes for each age-, sex-, and race-specific cell. Changes in these rates from 1970-1975, 1975-1980, 1980-1985, and 1985-1988 were evaluated to determine whether the long-term trend was stable, increasing, decreasing, or possibly changing direction altogether. In many cases the change in householder proportions from 1980 to 1988 was much less than the 1970 to 1980 change. In these instances, the more recent rate of change was used to project 1990 and 1995.

In other cases the evidence indicated that Kentucky lagged the nation, usually by ten years. In these instances, the householder proportion in Kentucky was linearly extrapolated to converge on the 1988 U.S. rate by the year 2000. When the trend was basically unstable, the householder proportions were held constant after 1985 or 1990. In a very few cases, particularly where householder proportions approached zero, minimum proportions were imposed. The householder proportions for the state as a whole are provided in Table 5 for 1980, 1985, 1988, 1990, and 1995.

Changes in the householder proportions are based on national trends which could shift in the future. The Institute will continue to monitor the Current Population Survey to determine when revisions in the householder proportions are warranted. Users of this series of household forecasts having access to local surveys or other local sources of data that are pertinent to estimating households (such as public utility data) are encouraged to share their data with the Institute.
